EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

George Hamzo is a partner at Lerners LLP in its London office practicing exclusively in the area of labour and employment law. George has expertise in virtually every employment related issue which may arise in the workplace including: human rights issues; workplace investigations; employment standards legislation including the Employment Standards Act, 2000 and the Canada Labour Code; the Occupational Health and Safety Act; employment contracts; and, restrictive covenants including non-competition and non-solicitation agreements. While George has developed a great deal of experience in litigation and can provide valuable representation to his clients in Superior Court, the Ontario Human Rights Tribunal and the Ontario Labour Relations Board, he also has a practical and forward-looking approach to employment and labour issues, helping his clients anticipate and resolve workplace issues before they arise.

In addition to being part of the firm's Commercial Litigation Group, George is also a member of the Business Law Group and provides valuable insights to the firm's business clients, including advising them on managing the labour and employment risks associated with business transactions such as the sale of a business or a merger. George also has a special interest in Education Law, and has assisted large institutional clients in that sector on numerous issues related employment contracts, severance obligations, and accommodation issues under the Human Rights Code.

George strives to provide his clients with practical, efficient and valuable advice to help his clients navigate through this difficult and sometimes confusing area of law.
