

ELIZABETH GRACE

Health Law

PARTNER

"Human issues pervade health law - for physicians, their professional judgement and reputations, and for patients, their health and sometimes their very existence. It is a privilege to practice in an area where such fundamental and compelling issues are always at play."

REPRESENTATIVE WORK

- ◆ Elizabeth is a partner of Lerners LLP who has practiced civil litigation since being called to the bar in 1995. Since then, she has worked extensively in the area of health law. This work has included advocating on behalf of health care professionals before their Colleges and the Health Professions Appeal and Review Board (HPARB), the courts, a commission of public inquiry, inquests, and the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario. She has also represented physicians in disputes with hospitals over privileges and related issues. One of the more high profile health law-related cases Elizabeth was involved in was the public inquiry into water safety in Walkerton, Ontario, where she represented the Medical Officer of Health and a senior administrative member of a public health unit. Elizabeth also has experience with investigations into sexual abuse and harassment allegations, and has served as an independent, third party investigator.
